Happy B-day Hubway!

Bike lovers to celebrate bike share's first birthday tonight

The city's beloved Hubway turns 1 year old on Saturday, but the birthday party starts tonight.

Sponsors and supporters of the bike share program will hold a free a bash at 6 p.m. inside the Let's Talk About Bikes exhibit at the Boston Society of Architects space on Congress Street.

"The exhibit is focused on the role of the bike in urban environments, specifically, Boston," said Mark Pasnik, one of the exhibit's curators.

Guests can check out 15 custom made bikes from local manufacturers, as well as photography by local bike-focused photographers and more.

"We are expecting a great turnout. We had 700 people attend the opening of the exhibit," said Mary Fichtner, program manager at the Boston Society of Architects. "The goal is to foster dialogue about why residents in Boston do, or do not, ride bikes. We are not trying to say that the bike is the answer to all of the environment's ills, but we are trying to get people talking about the benefits."

The Hubway bicycle sharing service launched in Boston on July 28, 2011, with 60 stations and 600 bicycles. The network serves Allston, Brighton, Downtown Boston, the South End and parts of South Boston and Roxbury. It has also crossed city limits into Cambridge, Somerville and Brookline.

Mayor Menino is expected to speak tonight, and there will also be bicycle-related demonstrations, like Boloco's bike-powered smoothie maker and Taza Chocolate's "Choco-Cycle," as well as free snacks and music.

Guests who ride bikes to the party will get free valet parking.

▶ The party will be held at the Let's Talk About Bikes exhibit, which examines the growth in bike infrastructure and ridership in the urban realm.

Hubway bicycle sharing service

How it works:

- Cyclists who sign up for Hubway have access to any of the bicycles in the network, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 3 seasons a year.
- It costs $70 to use Hubway for one year.
- It costs $12 for a "Casual 3-Day" rental.
- If you want Hubway for the day, you'll pay $5 for a 24-hour rental.

Be aware:

- The cost of memberships include unlimited rides under 30 minutes, but longer rides will cost extra.
- If the bike has not been returned and docked at a station after 24 hours, it is considered stolen and a fee of $1,000 is charged to the cyclist's credit card.
- Safety first: Hubway users are required to wear helmets.

How it started:

- On Earth Day, April 21, 2011, Mayor Thomas M. Menino signed a contract with Alta Bicycle Share, officially announcing the launch of the bike share system.
- The Hubway bicycle sharing service launched in Boston on July 28, 2011, with 60 stations and 600 bicycles.
- Hubway was initiated under Mayor Menino's nationally recognized Boston Bikes Program, which aims to build Boston into one of the world's premiere cycling cities. The city is working to expand the system into more neighborhoods and surrounding communities.

Cops face discipline after overtime audit

BOSTON. Ten Boston police officers were disciplined or transferred after an audit revealed fraud when the officers used overtime slips.

The violations included appearing in court without proper notice, unnecessary appearances and altering notification records, the department said yesterday.

Thousands of overtime records were audited after it was revealed that 32 officers from the drug unit were appearing in court to testify without being summonsed, racking up more than 400 hours of overtime pay in a two-year period.

Taunton casino could bring $511M in revenue

TAUNTON. An environmental filing from the Mashpee Wampanoag Tribe laid out initial revenue projections for its planned casino venture at $511.8 million per year, though that figure includes revenue from the entire casino complex not just gaming revenue.

A July 2 Environmental Notification Form stated that the "operation is expected to generate $511.8 million annually."

Tribal leaders were unavailable for comment, but a source close to the tribe confirmed that the number indicates the initial projection of total annual revenue. In addition to a casino, the tribe plans to build restaurants, retail stores and hotels.

Construction of the casino is far from guaranteed. Gov. Deval Patrick signed a gaming compact on July 12; the House last week approved that compact, which is pending before the Senate this week. METRO

New BU biolab site aims to 'give people confidence'

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

▶ Before researchers enter a Level 4 lab, they must put on a $2,600 protective suit. When they exit the lab, they must take a seven-minute decontamination shower.

The controversial Boston University biolab that has scared some residents into opposing its operation has launched a website in part to "give people confidence" in the lab.

While the website (www.bu.edu/neidl) launched earlier this month, the university announced the site for the National Emerging Infectious Diseases Laboratories yesterday.

Officials touted that the site includes access to quarterly incident reports; however, because certain research at the lab began in April, the report currently available on the site is for January to March and lists no incidents.

The site also includes sections on safety plans, research compliance, biographies of the researchers and video tours of the lab.

The aim of the website is to quell some of the fears associated with the lab. Neighbors in Roxbury and the South End have protested the lab for years over concerns about the types of diseases that it may house.

"Transparency is really a critical element," Stephen Burgay, BU senior vice president for external affairs, said to BU Today. "Given the unique nature of this lab, we found it was important to take as many steps as we can to give people confidence that they know exactly what's going on inside."

State officials gave permission for the center to begin low-level biosafety research in the facility and that started in April. Diseases that fall in to that category include strains of tuberculosis, the Dengue virus and measles.

However, research on the deadliest diseases has not yet been approved.

MBTA: There is no shortage of CharlieCards

In response to a recent report by the Boston Globe that some MBTA stations have come up short on CharlieCards, a MBTA spokesman said yesterday that riders should not be concerned about the T running out of the reloadable plastic cards.

"We have minor temporary outages at certain stations, and we make sure that those stations are reloaded as quickly as possible. We always keep an eye on it," said T Director of Innovation Joshua Robin, adding, "Beyond that, we've done more than any other agency to distribute transit cards."

Over the last month, Robin said the MBTA has received about 100,000 CharlieCards from its supplier. Over the last two years, there have been roughly 7 million CharlieCards issued.

"We've seen pretty phenomenal usage. I think we've done a great job," he said. METRO/MR

Officers shoot, kill man in car during traffic stop in Lynn

- Police allege man was carrying 'long arm weapon'
- Man was in car that rammed cruiser, authorities say

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO

Police tape still remained at the Ingalls Street scene yesterday afternoon.

Brandon Payne

A group of police officers fired upon a car that rammed a police cruiser during a traffic stop Sunday night and ended up killing a man riding inside.

Brandon Payne, 23, of Lynn, was shot twice when officers opened fire. He was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital where he died about 5:35 a.m. yesterday, according to the Essex district attorney's office.

Lynn police, in a statement, said they witnessed Payne walking near Essex Street and "carrying a secreted long arm weapon."

"Three Lynn police officers ... and a trooper fired at the suspect during the assault with the motor vehicle."
LYNN POLICE STATEMENT

Payne, along with two other men, then got into a car that was being followed by a second car.

When Lynn police tried to stop the car transporting Payne on Ingalls Street at about 9:30 p.m., the car allegedly rammed a police cruiser. Police said the stop included both marked and unmarked police vehicles.

"Three Lynn police officers and a Massachusetts State Police trooper fired at the suspect during the assault with the motor vehicle," Lynn police said in the statement.

Police said that the names of the officers involved in the shooting would not be immediately released. Authorities are investigating.

A shotgun and a handgun were recovered after the shooting, police said.

Payne has a criminal history, according to court records, but most of the charges were dismissed.

He was committed to the Department of Youth Services in 2002 for assault and battery, according to the Globe.

A woman who answered the door at Payne's grandmother's Lynn home declined to comment.

Family members outside Payne's father's home told the Globe he was devoted to his relatives, including his three young children.

Three charged

Three other people who were allegedly riding in the car were charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and gun charges, according to police.

- Sincere Lawson, 23, of New Jersey
- Khyron Jolley, 28, of Lynn
- James Finley, 34, of Lynn

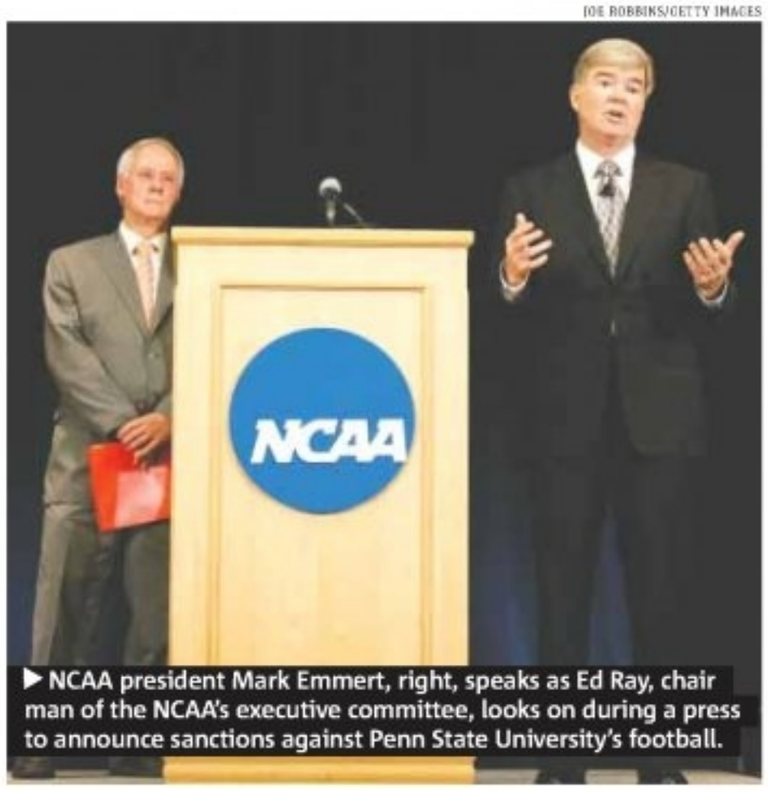
Romney backs minute of silence at Olympics to mark massacre of Israelis

LONDON. U.S. presidential candidate Mitt Romney said for the first time yesterday that he supports an official minute of silence at Friday's opening ceremony for the Olympic Games to honor Israeli athletes killed at the 1972 Munich Olympics.

Romney's move broke years of his own silence on the issue, including his time leading the Salt Lake City Olympics in 2002. During those Games, survivors of the slain Israelis called on the International Olympic Committee to observe a moment of silence to mark what was the 30th anniversary of the deaths in Munich. The IOC declined. REUTERS

Epic rebuilding lies ahead for Penn State

JOE ROBBINS/GETTY IMAGES



▶ NCAA president Mark Emmert, right, speaks as Ed Ray, chair man of the NCAA's executive committee, looks on during a press to announce sanctions against Penn State University's football.

The governing body of U.S. college sports fined Penn State University $60 million and voided its football victories for the past 14 seasons in an unprecedented rebuke for the school's failure to stop coach Jerry Sandusky's sexual abuse of children.

NCAA President Mark Emmert said the school had put "hero worship and winning at all costs" ahead of integrity, honesty and responsibility.

Penn State was not given the so-called "death penalty" that could have suspended its football program, but its punishment was viewed by many as potentially even worse in the longterm.

The punishment, announced by the National College Athletic Association at a news conference in Indianapolis, was unprecedented for its swiftness and breadth. It was the latest blow to an institution still reeling from Sandusky's conviction last month on child molestation charges.

The case was another blotch on the diminishing legacy of Paterno, who until yesterday's action had held the record for victories among big-time U.S. college football coaches in a career that spanned more than 40 seasons. Paterno lost that status since the NCAA's punishment includes voiding the Nittany Lions' victories between 1998 and 2011.

Emmert said the NCAA chose not to levy the so-called "death penalty" because it would have harmed individuals with no role in the Sandusky scandal. REUTERS

Apple sales pause as buyers await new iPhone model

NEW YORK. As iPhone fans await the release of a new model, they are delaying purchases and may cause Apple Inc. to post its slowest sales and profit growth in more than two years.

With a redesigned model probably arriving by October, analysts estimate that sales of iPhones — Apple's biggest source of revenue — slid in the fiscal third quarter from prior periods. While analysts predict that the next iPhone will be the best-selling smartphone yet from Cupertino, California-based Apple, the purchasing delays will probably weigh down results until the device hits stores. BLOOMBERG

BEIRUTE. Syria acknowledged for the first time yesterday that it had chemical and biological weapons and said it could use them if foreign countries intervened.

International pressure on President Bashar al-Assad has escalated dramatically in the last week, alongside a rebel offensive in the two biggest cities and a bomb attack which killed four members of his inner circle in Damascus.

Defying Arab foreign ministers who offered Assad a "safe exit" if he stepped down, the Syrian leader has launched fierce counter-offensives, reflecting his determination to keep power as an uprising enters its most violent phase. REUTERS

Massacre suspect has first court appearance

ARAPAHOE COUNTY SHERIFF'S OFFICE VIA GETTY IMAGES

▶ James Eagan Holmes was represented by a public defender during the brief hearing

The man accused of killing a dozen people in a Colorado movie theater during a showing of the new Batman film gave little away in his first court appearance yesterday, sitting silently in a red jailhouse jumpsuit with his hair dyed bright red.

James Eagan Holmes, 24, appeared groggy and emotionless during the hearing, looking ahead and occasionally closing his eyes. He was shackled at the wrists and ankles.

Members of the victim's families and others who were in the cinema looked on. McKayla Hicks was among them. She was seated in the movie theater next door to the one where the killings occurred when a bullet hit her chin.

"Once he walked into the room, it just made everything a lot harder," she told CNN.

"He just looks like a pathetic freak," she said. "I just want him put away forever."

Several times, when District Judge William Sylvester asked Holmes a question, one of his attorneys answered.

The former neuroscience student also left his apartment booby-trapped with explosives that police said could have destroyed the apartment complex. Police say they are still searching for a motive for the crime, which baffled fellow students and acquaintances. They described him as a quiet high-achiever whose past gave little inkling that anything was amiss.

Arapahoe County District Attorney Carol Chambers said she would consult with the victims and families of the dead before making a decision on seeking the death penalty. REUTERS/METRO

▶ We recognize that crazy twinkle in your eye, Miley.

Miley Cyrus standing very close by her man

Noticeably missing from Sunday night's Teen Choice Awards was teen queen Miley Cyrus, who won in the "Choice Hottie" and "Choice Fashion Icon" categories despite being a no-show.

Cyrus spent the evening in Philadelphia, where she's been hanging out as her fiance, actor Liam Hemsworth, shoots "Paranoia." So why didn't she make a quick trip back to L.A.? It seems Cyrus might have a little paranoia of her own: She's reportedly not happy with the amount of time Hemsworth has been spending with his "Empire State" co-star, Emma Roberts.

"Not only did she tell Liam it had to stop, she even confronted Emma," a source tells Perezhilton.com. "Miley more or less said, 'Hands off my man!' Emma couldn't care less what Miley thinks. She makes fun of Miley behind her back, saying she's just a washed-up tween star. Emma feels she has nothing to lose, so she's pushing it as far as she can with Liam."

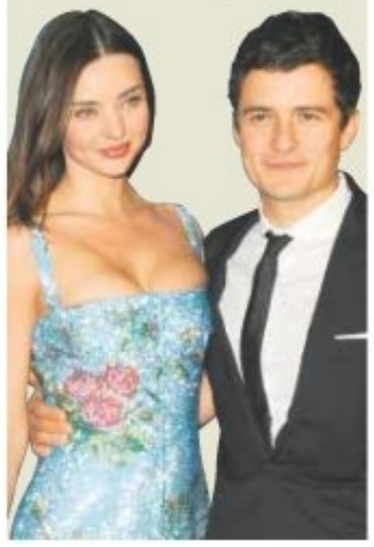
We like your spunk, Emma. But at this point, Miley's one pair of tattered pink sweatpants away from being a Philly girl — back away slowly, and keep your eyes on those acrylic nails.

Won't someone think of the beautiful children?

Miranda Kerr and Orlando Bloom have been spotted without their wedding rings on, prompting Famous magazine to report that their marriage "might be in trouble."

"She's had a lot on her plate — it could be that somewhere along the way her relationship with Orlando may have slipped between the cracks," says a source who has obviously never set eyes on Orlando Bloom.

A rep for the couple claims, naturally, that "there is absolutely no truth in the story."



Can't faze Charlize Theron

At this point in her career, Charlize Theron is a pro at getting her hands dirty on camera. When asked by W Magazine if death scenes or sex scenes are more difficult, the actress answered casually, "It depends on who you're doing the sex scene with. I don't have issues being naked. That sounds very slutty. What I mean is, I'm not hung up on my body."

Obviously, we're now playing the "Screw, marry, kill" game with her former onscreen partners. Our most difficult lineup: Johnny Depp, Michael Fassbender, Ben Affleck.

Talking points

Mariah Carey joins 'American Idol'

Kevin Reilly, Fox President of Entertainment, opened his executive session in front of journalists at the Television Critics Association press tour in Beverly Hills, Calif., yesterday by confirming Mariah Carey will be a new judge on "American Idol." Reilly addressed the speculation head-on by saying, "I really can't confirm anything except for one thing: We closed a deal very, very recently." To prove just how recently the contract had been signed, Reilly pulled out his cell phone and began making a phone call while dropping hints as to who they signed. After a couple technical difficulties, Reilly addressed his caller: "Hi Mariah, how are you?" When put on speakerphone, Carey apologized for not being at the press tour in person, but assured critics she is "so excited to be on 'Idol'" and "can't wait to get started."

▶ Kelly

Minka Kelly sex tape being shopped

Minka Kelly is the latest actress to be plagued by a possible sex tape scandal, as a 30-minute tape of Kelly getting intimate with an ex-boyfriend is reportedly being offered to the highest bidder, according to TMZ. The video is said to be shot in a semi-professional manner, and the website claims that it's clear Kelly knows she's being filmed. Some question if Kelly is actually of age in the video, as she is reportedly seen singing along with and dancing to two songs from Brandy's "Never Say Never" album, which was released 16 days before the actress' 18th birthday.

Take it off, Diaz!

Cameron Diaz isn't going to let a little rain ruin a good time. The actress reportedly got drenched on her way to a party at New York's Chelsea Market last week, according to People magazine. Undaunted, Diaz "took her shirt off at one point to wring out her drenched top," a source says.

A pre-apocalyptic vision

Ever wish for more hours in a day? That's what happens in Karen Thompson Walker's debut novel, 'The Age of Miracles,' with dire results

It's hard to resist the gravity of Brooklyn author Karen Thompson Walker's debut novel, "The Age of Miracles." Within the first few pages, we learn that the rate of the Earth's rotation has suddenly begun to slow — adding, at first, minutes to each day.

Unlike most apocalypse stories, which start with a bang, Walker's novel immerses us in a world that is slowly grinding to a halt. "It felt more interesting to tell a story where the rate of the destruction was slower, because that allowed for a wider range of reactions and a more nuanced reaction to the catastrophe," says Walker, who enlisted an astrophysicist to review her first draft.

"It just felt a little more realistic," she continues, "If I were reading a story like that, it would seem more convincing than something that changes the world overnight."

"The slowing," as it comes to be known, has as profound and damaging an effect on the human body and mind as it does on the Earth. But, as the days and nights become longer, it becomes difficult to identify which symptoms are due to disrupted circadian rhythms and which are due to stress and fear over not knowing whether the slowing of the planet will indeed mean the end of the world.

"I wanted to write a story that was partly about adapting to this changed world," Walker says, "And partly about wanting to carry on with whatever pieces of ordinary life it's possible to continue on with."

All of this is observed through the eyes of 11-year-old Julia, who lives with her parents in a California suburb. While the world slows, Julia's maturation accelerates — that is, if we define maturity as the ability to adapt when our perceived world falls apart (in Julia's case, both literally and figuratively).

Though the premise of "The Age of Miracles" brings to mind current environmental concerns, Walker says that the novel is not meant to be a statement on climate change. Though, she says, "I did try to learn from climate change both what's happening in terms of climate change but also the debates that surround it, how people conceive of and respond to it. I did try to learn from that as I tried to predict and figure out how my characters would respond to similarly slow-paced disaster."

PBS at TCA: Day 2

The power (and vanity) of celebrity

Meg Ryan talks oppression • Mr. Rogers returns — sort of • David Geffen doesn't think song is about him

Nostalgia kicked off the second day of the Television Critics Press tour in Beverly Hills, Calif., on Sunday, when PBS presented a panel for "Daniel Tiger's Neighborhood," the first TV series from The Fred Rogers Company since the beloved "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood."

Daniel Tiger is the sweater-wearing 4-year-old son of Daniel Stripe Tiger, Fred Rogers' first puppet from the original series. In the new animated series, the residents of the Neighborhood of Make-Believe are all grown up with kids of their own, who learn lessons on developmental issues (think: separation anxiety, disappointment and bedtime routines).

"This is designed to be your first television experience as a very young child. It carries the legacy of Fred Rogers in so many ways, but it's not necessary to enjoy this to know anything about Fred and his Neighborhood of Make-Believe," said executive producer Kevin Morrison.

At the same time, parents who grew up calling Mr. Rogers their neighbor will be happy to know "there's little nods of love throughout the episodes," explains executive producer Angela Santomero. "If you are a big fan of Fred like I was, you'll see his little red sweaters."

Inspiring tales of human resolution set the stage for "Half the Sky," the documentary based on the best-selling book by Nicholas Kristof and Sheryl WuDunn about oppression of women and girls. Also on the panel were actresses Meg Ryan, Diane Lane and America Ferrera, who traveled with the journalists to help tell the stories of those around the world fighting for women's rights.

Maro Chermayeff, executive producer and director of "Half the Sky," said celebrities were brought into the project to "help the audience find a way in" to the upsetting stories of trafficking and mutilation. "If you give people a chance and you find some new ways for them to come to some of the subject matter, they will come and they'll respond," she said.

Ryan said while the spotlight is shining on a celebrity, "you can just saddle up next to something smart and important and that will get some attention."

Speaking of celebrity: Star-making legend David Geffen sat on a panel for the "American Experience" film documenting his career in music and film, "Inventing David Geffen." He'd been flown in from Sardinia for the event, and seemed in a hurry to get back — his answers to critics' questions were short and not very quotable. Not until he was asked about the Carly Simon song "You're So Vain," that is, and how he had been fingered as the subject of the tune.

"No, no. That's simply not true," he said. "Not to say I'm not vain, but I'm not her vain."

Distraction — or something more? All about ADHD

We checked in with Dr. Andrew Adesman, who heads the Developmental and Behavioral Pediatrics department of Children's Medical Center in New Hyde Park, N.Y., to give us the lowdown on attention disorders and those oft-used acronyms, ADD and ADHD.

What's the difference between ADD and ADHD?

There's a confusing tendency to refer to non-hyperactive attention deficit disorder as ADD to differentiate it from the type that also includes hyperactivity. But really ADHD is the umbrella term for the entire disorder.

What are treatment options?

Treatment is mostly about intervention and management: intervention in the classroom and home settings, and also medical intervention and management of behavior and actions. At home, the parent and a psychologist work together to educate the parent on how to form effective positive consequences for good behavior and negative ones for bad. The child has to be motivated to adapt [his or her] behavior. Medication is tricky. Some see it as a last resort and others see it as part of an initial treatment plan.

Are there any new treatments people are talking about?

The essential fatty acids and fish oils seem to be somewhat effective. But it might not be sufficient. Neurofeedback or EEG biofeedback is a controversial treatment because it's expensive and the research is mixed. But it does seem to work and there are those who advocate it as effective.

PIXLAND

▶ Boys are more likely to be diagnosed with ADHD than girls, the CDC says.

Q&A

How can you tell if a child is just a normal, bouncy kid or if he or she has ADHD?

▶ Diagnosis is a challenge. Children with ADHD don't differ that much from children who don't have it, [except in] the severity and frequency of being distracted. If it's significant and ... interfering with a child's function, then it's likely ADHD. If a child is struggling in school it can be ADD, but it isn't always. There are no blood tests, no neurological tests. We're relying on clinical history from families and teachers. Diagnosis needs to be a careful study of the child and the overall situation.

A+ homework and test-taking tips

Your children's homework and tests help prepare them for the world outside of school. For now, though, good grades are the goal. Boston-based pediatrician Dr. Claudia Gold, author of "Keeping Your Child in Mind: Overcoming Defiance, Tantrums, and Other Everyday Behavior Problems by Seeing the World through Your Child's Eyes," provides tips to help you guide the students in your life through their academic pursuits.

Homework

▶ Create a schedule conducive to success. "For some, it works best if they do [homework] right away. Others need a break for physical activity or relaxation. In general, children should have control over when they do their homework in a way that is developmentally appropriate."

▶ Don't take over your child's assignments. "Most of the problems that occur involve conflict between the parent and the child."

▶ Refuel right before tackling assignments. "Fruit, cereal or a sandwich are good choices."

Time management

▶ Allow for breaks. "Some kids may need to take regular breaks from homework and studying to engage in calming self-regulating activities such as walking, running, art or music."

▶ Be reasonable. Keep in mind that all students learn at different rates so some may need more time than others. "Time management has to be tailored to the characteristics of the child. It has to be individualized to the child's particular needs."

Test-taking

▶ Have them prepare to adapt. "In general, kids do not have control over the environment and the way tests are given, and they need to learn how to accommodate. If the kid does have attention problems or does have particular issues, there need to be accommodations in place for that child."

▶ Prep their bodies. "Getting sufficient sleep and having nutritious food are good preparations for a test."

▶ You can lend a hand on homework — but make sure your child is grasping the lesson.

Is fallen statue the end of the story?

While I agree with the decision not to leave the Joe Paterno sculpture as it was, they could do something more creative to remember the victims of his negligence. I propose keeping the sculpture but commissioning an addition: the figure of an abused child lying at his feet. That way, he'd now be portrayed leading his team forward while looking straight ahead — and ignoring what's right under his nose.

ERIC HAMELL, VIA E-MAIL

The outrage about the Penn State scandal is well deserved. Those who applaud the penalties placed on the university are correct in doing so. Those who still praise Paterno are the problem in our world, putting sports above human dignity and putting obscene profits above the suffering of children. But this scandal pales in comparison to the abuse hidden by the Catholic church. "Dealing" with it internally? Disgraceful! Too many people pay more attention to the Super Bowl, World Series, etc. than to what really matters: human suffering.

ROBERT LA ROSA, VIA E-MAIL

You mean to tell me that in 25 years, nobody in the NCAA ever heard anything about Jerry Sandusky being a pedophile — that he was using his foundation to get close to young boys? As far as I'm concerned, they're all part of the same protective network; and yet the NCAA gets to act like one of the victims here — the innocent bearers of justice and punishment. Don't be fooled — they all knew. This show is the PR of damage control. This is what happens when you let a stupid institution like football become all-powerful.

MICHAEL CHIMENTI, VIA E-MAIL

Hindsight aids new outlook on old act

Mr. Gottlieb, in a nutshell the repeal of the Glass-Steagall Act allowed major banks to use huge funds, previously forced to be kept in safe low-risk, low-return investments, for investing in far riskier securities. In the late '90s, such liberation was hailed as a positive move, though in the hindsight it proved to be reckless. If that was not deregulation, I don't know what is. I'm also questioning Metro's publishing Mr. Gottlieb's letter of more than 200 words, more than double the limit. Is there a "slight" chance of a bias here? Would you publish a pro-Bush letter of a comparable length?

GAROLD MINKIN, VIA E-MAIL

Disarming gun control argument is short-sighted

Following the senseless Aurora massacre, I heard someone dismiss the renewed demands for more gun control by positing that had the madman not been able to access the weapons he used, he would have found some other method of committing his crimes. I fear this is a rationalization too many use. It is akin to saying that removing small objects around an infant is pointless because the child will just find something else to choke on.

Horoscope

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. You're well equipped to instinctively handle financial or commercial affairs in a smart, rewarding manner. Use these gifts to put yourself on the right side of the ledger.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. In pursuing a project that recently captured your attention, bold moves might be necessary. Determine the course of action yourself.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Your powers of persuasion are exceptionally strong. You shouldn't have any trouble getting others to support the ideas you espouse, once they understand the benefits.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. The possibilities for fulfilling your ambitious objectives are exceptionally good at this point in time. However, it will be up to you to use your gifts to your advantage.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. You have excellent leadership qualities as well as the ability to be a very good team player. Your teammates will recognize this and want only you as their team captain.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. If conditions are such that you can haggle over the price of something expensive that you want to buy, by all means do so. A little shrewd bargaining could sweeten the deal.

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Although you're a gregarious person, you don't dwell in a world of idle chatter. When you have something important to say, you'll do so with purpose and conviction.

Best East Coast family beaches

We rounded up the top beaches on the East Coast for families Whether you've got older kids or little ones — or you're seeking a little calm, these are spots to hit

SPENCER PLATT/GETTY IMAGES

Hey, Southampton! Fodor's thinks you're great!

Old Silver Beach

North Falmouth, Massachusetts
Great for small kids, Old Silver Beach has warm waters, soft sand and a sandbar at low tide that creates pools for little ones to explore. It also has lifeguards, restrooms, showers and a snack bar not far from where you'd put your towels down. It's a smaller beach, so it can get crowded on nice days, but it's worth the trip anyway.
Insider tip: There's a $20 parking fee for visitors, but if you plan to park, go early — the beach is so popular that during the summer, the lot fills up quickly.

Virginia Beach

Virginia
With lots of on-the-water and nearby activities, Virginia Beach is great for the whole family. It offers 28 miles of public beach, a popular three-mile boardwalk and events almost every weekend on the boardwalk and surrounding areas, including the Boardwalk Art Show, East Coast Surfing Championship and Rock 'n' Roll Half-Marathon.
Insider tip: Nearby First Landing State Park features trails for hiking and biking, camp sites, swimming and sports rental equipment.

Corolla Beach

North Carolina's Outer Banks
The draws for families to Corolla Beach are many. Think of smooth-sand beaches, nearby lighthouses, water sports (like Jet Skis and kayak tours) and the chance to spot beautiful, wild horses that sometimes take trips along the beach. It's considered one of the Outer Banks' best undiscovered beaches.
Insider tip: Take the family on an adventure with Beach Jeeps of Corolla. They offer Wild Horse Sightseeing tours, as well as both guided and self-driven tours in Jeeps, 4x4s and Escalades.

Coopers Beach

Southampton, New York
With warm waters and seven miles of dune-backed sands, Coopers Beach offers an amazing view of the Atlantic and historic mansions that line the shore, white sand and clear blue water, plus fantastic photo opps. Keep in mind that parking is pricey ($40 per day) and the small lot can fill up quickly.

Insider tip: For even more fun, join in the family "Build a Sandcastle to the Stars" event over Labor Day Weekend. The contest is for all ages, but it has kid-focused prizes donated by businesses.

Make your own sequel

- 'On Golden Pond' came out before most of our readers were even born
- But the region where it was filmed has a special beauty worth revisiting

LAKES REGION ASSOCIATION

Imagine looking out your window to see this. Based on the foliage, the Squam Lakes will look like this in a few months.

It's been more than 30 years since the movie "On Golden Pond" revealed the natural beauty of New Hampshire's Squam Lakes to a worldwide audience. Truth is, it's even more wonderful in real life.

Boating

Squam Lakes comprises Little and Big Squam, which are dotted by a number of islands and coves providing sanctuary for those famous loons and other wildlife, including bald eagles. Canoe and kayak rentals are available at the Squam Lakes Association (www.squamlakes.org). You can also relax on the Squam Lakes Science Center (www.nhnature.org) cruise and get the dish on making the movie, too.

Walking

Though it gets a little touristy, the view from Rattlesnake Mountain (www.nhdfl.org) is spectacular. There are woodland trails at The Loon Center (www.loon.org), which offers a gift shop packed with cute stuff you never knew you needed.

Dining, drinking

Don't miss the Inn Kitchen + Bar at The Squam Lake Inn (www.squamlakeinn.com) with unbelievably delicious goodies that are seasonal-locavore. The wines are boutique! Apart from being in an 1890s New Hampshire inn, the restaurant wouldn't be out of place in "Sideways." Don't miss: A stack of portobello mushrooms sandwiched with tangy goat cheese, parmesan-crusted baked haddock and frozen key lime pie!

The quaint Corner House Inn (www.cornerhouseinn.com) has an upstairs bar packed with stuffed animals and bric-a-brac. The funky Common Man (www.thecman.com) has exposed posts and beams from trees that probably grew before the Revolutionary War. An upstairs lounge and outdoor deck offer nightlife options.

Stay

The Inn on Golden Pond (www.innongoldenpond.com) was built in 1879, originally as a private home, and is set on 50 acres of beautiful undeveloped woodland. It's spacious, with a dining room, sitting room, TV room and an office with a computer. Wi-Fi is available throughout. Eat a home-cooked breakfast with hummingbirds fluttering by the window. The Manor on Golden Pond (www.manoron-goldenpond.com) was built as a private mansion and is now a genteel resort with eclectic guest rooms — everything from bohemian boudoir to rugged rustic — tennis courts, an outdoor pool and peaceful Seasons spa.

Opinion

ANGELO CATALDI
THE VOICE OF THE SPORTS FAN

PATERNO NOW JUST ANY OTHER JOE

The NCAA did something yesterday that was so out of character, so dynamic, that it strains belief even now, 24 hours later. In one extraordinary act, the normally comatose governing body of college athletics destroyed not just the football program, but also the legacy of Joe Paterno.

Metro does not endorse the opinions of the author, or any opinions expressed on its pages. Opposing viewpoints are welcome. Send 100-word submissions to letters@metro.us.

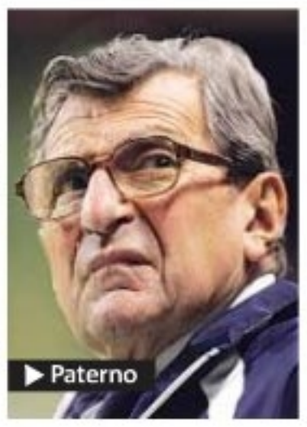
Just 10 days after the Freeh report, the NCAA decided that it wasn't enough to fine Penn State $60 million for allowing children to be raped for 14 years, not enough to take away 10 precious scholarships a year, not enough to block bowl appearances for four seasons.

No — in the end, the memory of Paterno's 46-year reign required equally aggressive action. So the NCAA took 14 years of victories — 111 in all — and removed them forever from Paterno's coaching record. Suddenly, he didn't win more games than any college coach, 409. He is 12th now, with 298. Just another Joe. And after placing sanctions on the football program that will render it irrelevant for at least a decade, NCAA president Mark Emmert made no secret of his disgust over the culture at Penn State, a world that placed football above basic decency.

"These events should serve as a call to every single school and athletics department to take an honest look at its campus environment and eradicate the 'sports are king' mind-set that can so dramatically cloud the judgment of educators," Emmert said.

Joe Paterno created that environment with pure, unadulterated bullying. That's why he got away with throwing his bosses out of his home twice when they tried to convince him to step down in recent years. It's why he snapped at the most benign questions from timid reporters for the last 20 years of his tenure. It's why he bulldozed the department of student affairs when asked to follow the rules.

What is happening now — the sanctions, the protests, the national disgrace — is long-overdue payback for years of obnoxious behavior cloaked in cranky charm. Paterno thought he could get away with anything in the domain that he ruled. And for a very long time, he did. But there is a limit even to this kind of hero worship. And the limit, we now know, is looking the other way for 14 years while children were raped. What the NCAA did yesterday — against all odds — was something the Penn State administration didn't have the courage to do, what the chummy media who covered the gruff old man had no intention of doing, and what the hypnotized masses were too star-struck to do.



▶ Paterno

The NCAA made a strong and powerful statement about Joe Paterno. In one act of anger and disgust, the NCAA wiped away 14 years of lies. Paterno is no longer at the top of the list of coaches in the record book, just as his statue has been relegated to a place of obscurity in an unmarked room at Beaver Stadium, never to be worshipped again. Joe Paterno's reign of arrogance and fraud is finally over. Justice has been served.

Report: Sox want pitcher Josh Johnson

The Red Sox have targeted Miami pitchers Josh Johnson and Anibal Sanchez as the MLB nonwaiver trade deadline approaches on July 31, according to ESPNBoston.com.

Johnson has the potential to be one of the most effective hurlers in baseball as he led the NL with a 2.30 ERA in 2010. He is just 5-7 this season, however, with a 4.35 ERA.

Sanchez is also 5-7 this year and has a 3.94 ERA.

Sanchez was once a star pitcher in the Red Sox farm system but was traded along with Hanley Ramirez in the trade that brought Josh Beckett and Mike Lowell to Boston.

▶ Josh Johnson

Sanchez threw a no-hitter for the Marlins on Sept. 6, 2006.

The Red Sox have also been engaged in talks with the Chicago Cubs, according to reports.

WEEI.com reported yesterday that Boston asked about the availability of right-handed pitcher Ryan Dempster prior to the starter being dealt to Atlanta. The deal is pending MLB approval. METRO/MB

The hair up there: Wes Welker gets transplant

Everyone copes with difficulty in different ways.

Wes Welker seems headed for many more months of contract issues with the Patriots — but he will be receiving a second source of income in the form of being a spokesman for Leonard Hair Transplant Associates.

According to CSNNE.com, Welker got a hair transplant by Dr. Robert Leonard. The New England company said the procedure "involved transplanting follicles to an area of Welker's scalp where his hair had started to thin. … Welker was immediately able to resume his regular activities." METRO
